State Bar Launches eLegal

Too many demands, not enough time, too much information.

All of our lives seem to run in this circle. In the interest of helping you run that race more efficiently, the State Bar has inaugurated the eLegal, an electronic newsletter designed to deliver concise and relevant information to assist you in your practice.

This is one of the most important and valuable member services we have to offer, and it comes to State Bar members at no additional cost—a service covered by your Bar dues. The report is delivered to the desktops of all State Bar members who have given us their e-mail address. You have the ability to unsubscribe, but first you should know what you will receive twice every month:

- Quick access to court opinions and brief summaries from the Arizona Court of Appeals and Ninth Circuit federal court.

- Ethics opinions and ethics tips to help you navigate potentially troubled waters
- Law-related news headlines that will help you stay current on news that could affect the profession or perhaps even a case on which you are working

- State Bar information and events
- Tips to help improve your office efficiency
- Lawyer jobs that are available
- Classified advertising, from one lawyer to another eLegal is yet another example of how the State Bar is using technology to deliver valuable and cost-efficient services to you. If the Bar does not yet have your e-mail address, I urge you to use this opportunity to update your information with the membership records department at 602-340-7239.

I am proud to say that eLegal is one of the many ways I have tried to improve the Bar's service to you during my term as President, which ends this month. I am truly grateful to so many of you who have helped me throughout the year to address the challenging issues that face our profession.

As I hand off the leadership to others, it's important that you know the State Bar is a healthy and productive organization, but it is only as good as the members who participate in the Bar's efforts to improve its service to the profession.

I am honored to have had the opportunity to serve you. ▲
